

Review of Levinson Axelrod, P.A.

By Rev. Peter W. Guilfoyle

As a member of the clergy, I was a bit apprehensive about seeking a lawyer after I was injured in a fall at work. From what I had seen from court cases as a spectator it was not something I really wanted to be involved with as a Christian minister. But my experience with Levinson Axelrod was very positive and uplifting.

I was assigned to two lawyers. Richard J. Marcolus was the first attorney involved in my case, and his professionalism and experience was quite admirable. And then I was introduced to Celine M. Vitale. Celine is very professional and personable in her work.

Celine made me feel very comfortable right away. Every time we had to get together for a court date she would meet with me before we entered the courtroom and update me on what was about to happen. I never felt like I was going to court, she made me feel as if I was just going to visit a friend. But as friendly as she was outside of the courtroom, she was a dynamo inside the courtroom.

Celine knew every aspect of my case as if it were her own and she knew just the right questions to ask me in court so that the judge could have a full understanding of what I was going through and the amount of loss I had experienced in my life due to the injury. I could not have expected a better advocate for my cause, and Celine took what I thought would be a stressful situation and turned it into a wonderfully positive experience for me and for my family. Her passion for her job, and her compassion towards her clients, is without limit. She is a fighter.

Throughout my case I was hoping for a fair and equitable settlement for my injuries. I was pleasantly surprised when we received a six-figure settlement at the conclusion of the case, but more importantly I believe I found a new friend in Celine.

I would recommend Levinson Axelrod, P.A., and especially Celine M. Vitale, to anyone who is looking for an advocate for their case. You won't be disappointed.
